

It's about time

Stella Geppert, Thea Timm & Bernd Trasberger (DE)

Opening Thursday the 6th of August from 5 to 8 pm.
August 7th through September 25th 2009.
Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays from 12 to 5 pm.

Skulpturi.dk in Copenhagen is the third place of refuge in which Stella Geppert, Thea Timm and Bernd Trasberger let their works interact. After having shown at Cluster in Berlin and Galerie Oelfrüh in Hamburg, a charitable space (gemeinnütziger Raum) is created in Skulpturi.dk in Copenhagen

The practice of charity means giving help to those in need who are not related to the giver. Geppert, Timm and Trasberger adapt the different aspects of institutional aesthetics of such charitable organisations, events or meetings. Their autonomous works relate to each other and intensify into a fragmented, associative overall image, that constitutes a space by means of sculpture and installation.

Not just in the title of the show, Its about time, but also in their works they evoke the foreshadowing of an anticipated, recurring happening:

Thea Timm deals with the metamorphosis of materials and the interface between two dimensional image and accessible space. She does research on the insignia of associations and societies and puts up an expansive pennant work that fixes a single moment in a sculptural way.

Right in the center of the room, Bernd Trasberger creates a module out of turquoise burlap, functioning as a pinboard. The operating mode of an institution becomes apparent similar to an analogue switchboard, a public diagram visible from all sides like on an advertising column.

A similar interface is created by Stella Geppert. Our actions always have unintended aftermath at places we don't expect. Her work Ohne es zu merken (Without noticing) consists out of a room-high broom. It draws onto walls and ceiling with the edge of its stick whilst sweeping. Like a seismograph it charts the oscillation of a slight quake.

Is this the registration of what happened or the adumbration of a greater occurrence? We don't know yet, but it's about time!

Sincerely

The artists and Skulpturi.dk
